Hot az was yesterday, to-day was actually and appreciably hotter, but Prophet Ellas threw out the chunk of cooling information that it wasn't likely to be a record-breaker in the matter of heat or humidity unless both these forces scored 'way up in the nineties. The hottest July 17 on record was in 1885, when the mercury reached 93, Mr. Dunn thought it likely that the mercury to-day would reach the nineties, but was not confident that the record would be broken or even equalled. "The indications," he concluded, "are for generally fair and continued warm weather, with possible thunder showers."

At 9.30 this morning Forceaster Dunn's thermometer on top of the Equitable Building, registered 85 degrees. At the Bame hour the instrument in front of Hudnut's pharmacy on Broadway, showed 80, and that at Perry's, in Park Row, 84.

Little wonder then that after a sleep-less, torrid night, New Yorkers imag-ined it was much hotter this morning than the 77 degrees Perry's themometer showed at 6 o'clock, the 82 at 9 and the 64 degrees at 10 o'clock. One glance at a street thermometer was enough to drive almost any pedes-trian to drink, and soda-water and lem-onade stands did a rushing business, Mayn thirsty souls sought satisfaction in coplous and cooling 'steins,' which had the double effect of causing a larger thirst and an increased perspira-tion.

Palm-leaf fans and broad-brimmed straw hats had the call everywhere, with the neglige shirt and the russet shoe. Probably the coolest man on Park Row was William F. Howe, little Abe Hummel's big law partner, who appeared respiendent in light checked trousers, neglige shirt, white vest, black alpaca coat and broad-brimmed straw hat, with an enormous purple ribbon visible for blocks.

At 11 o'clock Forecaster Dunn's thermometer registered S, and at 11.40 had reached Ss. At 11 o'clock Ferry's instrument scored Ss.

The dead man's hands where he had clutched the fatal wire were būrned, as were the parts of his body which came in contact with other live wires.

The glove on the right hand had been wern down very much, and was wet from perspiration. This accounted for the electricity passing into Leary's body with such deadly effect. It is thought that if he had worn a perfect glove, he would not have lost his life.

The body was taken to Carey's morgue.

Madden objected and tried to explain, but without success. Finally, as he did not move fast enough to suit the police, one of the officers, he claims, struck him in the face, while the roundsman applied vile names to him several times. Finally, after Madden had been forced into the gutter, the roundsman ordered Kent to arrest him, while the drunken woman and man, who were responsible for the disturbance, were allowed to go. In court this morning in explanation of their conduct the two officers insisted that Madden was disorderly, drew a crowd and refused to go home when ordered to move on.

This evidence left Justice Koch no other alternate than to hold Madden. In default of $100 ball he must go to the Island for a month.
